Kirk Takes Lead Over Giannoulias for Obama’s Senate Seat

Raleigh, N.C. - For the first time since March, Republican Mark Kirk has a small lead over Democrat Alexi Giannoulias to succeed Roland Burris, appointed by former Governor Rod Blagojevich to temporarily fill President Obama's vacated Senate seat. Kirk has $40 \%$ to Giannoulias' $36 \%$, with Green Party candidate LeAlan Jones’ share continuing to slowly decline, now at 8\%, and Libertarian Mike Labno measured for the first time at 3\%. In mid-August, Giannoulias led with 37\% to Kirk’s 35\% and Jones’ 9\%.

The difference is, as many places, voter enthusiasm on the GOP side. Kirk pulls 79\% of his own party, up from $74 \%$ last time, while Giannoulias earns only $68 \%$ of Democrats, down from $72 \%$. That is because Kirk now gets $9 \%$ of Democrats to Giannoulias’ 2\% of Republicans, when in August, the Democrat got 6\% crossover support to Kirk's 5\%. With the entrance of Labno at 5\% of unaffiliated and third-party voters, Kirk's lead among them, while still healthy at 41-27-13 over Giannoulias and Jones, is slightly down from 36-20-15 in the previous survey.

This party unity gap and resulting tight race with two third-party candidates splitting 11\% of the vote reflect the tepid feelings voters have for their major-party choices in this election. Only $39 \%$ say they are excited about who they themselves are voting for in the Senate race, while $45 \%$ wish someone better were running. At $38-44$, the plurality Democrats reflect the overall voter sentiment, but Republicans are flipped, at 45-39. Independents are by far the least satisfied with their options, at 32-54.

Kirk's improvement in the horse race has come despite voters slightly souring on him personally in the last month. He and Giannoulias are now equally disliked, with respective 33-47 and 33-48 favorability ratings. Voters have split slightly in favor of the Democrat, 7-6, since August, but against the Republican, 7-13.
"This election is in some ways a referendum on President Obama, and with some seats moving back toward the Democrats of late, and others suddenly moving toward the Republicans, this race could end up deciding control of the Senate," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling.

PPP surveyed 470 likely Illinois voters from September $23^{\text {rd }}$ to $26^{\text {th }}$. The survey's margin of error is $+/-4.5 \%$. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
